Your Meal Ticket To The Planet's Greatest Restaurants

I'll admit, when I'm traveling anywhere, the food plays a big part in my decision. More and more recently, "foodie" vacations are becoming increasingly popular. Referred to as gastronomy, defined as the art or science of good food or eating, this drive has been luring people all over the world to taste the best cuisines. Tasting these places for yourself is definitely worth obtaining your USA passport, especially because of how easy it's gotten.

Let's start our foodie vacation investigation halfway around the globe in Singapore. Yes, foodies from all over the world travel here to experience some of the finest Asian restaurants you can ever enjoy. The Singapore natives are quite passionate about their eating and drinking and their culture and culinary art will insure your enjoyment. It can certainly be said that their culture is food and food is their culture. Your enjoyment here will not be limited, however, as you can also enjoy delights originating from France, Italy, China and Malaysia.

Barcelona in Spain is another huge destination for those following their stomachs. Huge food markets populate the streets and you will find restaurants boasting some of the tastiest food in the world. Barcelona is a food lover's paradise. Definitely try the tapas, a famous Spanish dish, as well as investing in a bottle of authentic Spanish olive oil. The Pastas Alimenticias bakery and the Mercat de la Boqueria are two world renowned places to eat. Traveling to Spain means sampling some of the most delicious food around, and if you love food, this is the place to go.

No foodie vacation list would be complete without listing Avignon, France. The largest percentage of the economy of this town relates to the food industry, both the manufacturing, exporting and, of course, presentation and enjoyment. Wineries, vineyards and restaurants provide the visitor with boundless opportunities to enjoy the tasty meals offered here as well as some of the finest wines worldwide.

Bologna, Italy has to be one of the food capitals of the world. Italian food is definitely my favorite, and nothing beats the authentic spaghetti and pizza from Italy. Fresh markets line the streets and the restaurants feature some of the most delicious Italian food you will ever experience. Bologna is also the birth place of many of our favorite foods, including tasty Bolognese sauce, prosciutto, salami, local wines, and mortadella. While the food is absolutely delicious, Bologna is also a very beautiful place to visit.

Traveling internationally requires a passport and that need not cause you any alarm.
